

Saint John Church-Baptist of Chicago, Illinois, a predominantly African American mission oriented congregation, seeks an experienced pastor. The congregation is composed of primarily professional and retired persons, is seeking a pastor who has strong preaching, worship, and pastoral care skills. They should bring an enthusiastic and notable presence to the life of the church and the community, and will be instrumental in growing the church.

The 108-year-old church, located on Michigan Avenue, in the Bronzeville Community, on the South side of Chicago, is adjacent to a Chicago Public Library. Many cultural and educational institutions, such as the University of Chicago, Illinois Institute of Technology, and the DuSable Museum (the oldest African American Museum in the U.S.), are in the community of the church.

The church building, which includes a 900 person sanctuary, has been well maintained. The complex includes several buildings and adjacent properties.
