God allow me to see the world through your eyes

"Moreover, each time I read of the Lord walking the streets of Bethany or Jerusalem and telling a parable, I see my Indian culture, which also deals in parables" ~ Ravi Zacharias

Before India

To prepare for ministry in India, which comes up in February, I have been researching, writing, reading proverbs and folktales, and meditating on the book of Acts.

More and more, God has driven this reality into my heart: The community of believers described in Acts 2:42-47, did not have political influence, property, wealth, or status. Yet, they had a power and a way about them that every present-day church envies. My prayer is that the church of Jesus (Sadguru Yeshu) in India will increasingly have the same power and way about them as the first church in Acts.

I have opportunity to consult and coach Frontier Missionaries with YWAM living and serving in South Asia. My input will be centered around fostering sustainability and avoiding unhealthy dependency, which are critical components to multiplying disciples throughout every tribe, tongue and people of South Asia and beyond.

Upon returning from India, I will share with you about my experience, as well as, other fantastic present and future opportunities.

Thank you for your investment, commitment, and generosity. A big bear hug to all of you.
