"When Should I Send A Thank you Note?"

Psalm 30

1. Prosperity made David feel invincible. While deep down inside, David knew that whatever he had was a gift from God, his wealth, power and fame had an intoxicating effect on him. David felt self-reliant, self-secure and independent of God. Sound familiar? Don't we often feel invincible when things are going well? We're usually pretty secure just before our false sense of security proves to be false...
2. So, when should I send a thank you note? Thank you notes must be sent after receiving a gift. This includes wedding, birthday, sympathy, graduation, bridal or baby showers, and any similar situation. Thank you notes should also be sent to the hostess of a party in your honor, after being entertained by your boss, or when you have stayed as a house guest (unless it was with a close relative or friend). Send thank you notes for any sympathy or congratulations letters or cards that you receive that included a handwritten, personal message. It is not necessary to send a thank you for preprinted cards that were simply signed. [From "oureverydaylife.com"]
3. Emily Post tells us through the internet that we should send a thank you note on very specific occasions. Let's see what another life expert (Billy Graham) has to say on the subject?

Are you thankful no matter what? Perhaps you lost your job recently. Or you may have lost your health, or a loved one. Such circumstances can be tremendously difficult. But even so, we all have much to be thankful for.
