MOMENT'S REFLECTION

"God can do anything, you know—far more than you could ever imagine or guess or request in your wildest dreams."
-Ephesians 3:20 (The Message)

As we begin this year's stewardship campaign, I invite you to focus on that wonderfully hopeful passage from Ephesians. "God is able to accomplish abundantly far more than you all you can ask or imagine." The passage forms the theological inspiration for the theme, "FEARLESS GENEROSITY."

The theme begins with the assumption that fearless generosity isn't easy or natural for us. Most of us are habitually fearful givers—fearful, in the sense that money is the strongest symbol of security in our lives, and when we choose to give some of our money away, it feels like a loss of security. Most of us believe that financial security is built on the principle of accumulation, not giving.

In this sense, the driving question is: "How can we break an old habit of guarded, cautious giving?" Put more hopefully: "How is it possible to think of giving as something positive?"

Perhaps one way to change the old habit of cautious giving is to shift the focus away from why we should give (I could quote you a hundred scripture verses, most of which you already know), to a greater emphasis on the positive effect the practice of generosity has on the giver. In the church, perhaps we should quit using the phrase, "Give until it hurts," and start repeating, "Give until your joy increases!"

In their book, The Paradox of Generosity, authors Christian Smith and Hilary Davidson suggest that giving has a significant causal effect. Meaning? Increased generosity seems to lead to greater happiness (less depression, more joy), and stronger health. The practice of generosity also works the other way, too. Happier, healthier people tend to be more generous. The main take-away is that generosity, happiness, and more resilient health are deeply connected.

In thinking about the practice of generosity, the authors offer three additional insights:

Sustained generosity carries more impact than "one-off-generosity." In other words, random acts of kindness are good, but they don't carry the same benefits of happiness and health as a life of generosity. Generosity is a way of life, not a momentary impulse.

Generosity begins where you are. The authors say: "There's a certain amount of generosity that has a fake-it-till-you-make-it aspect." You don't have to wait for the purest motives. Just do it! In time, you'll grow into a deeper experience of generosity.

The biggest obstacle to generosity is fear. If giving is good for us, why do we hesitate when it comes to giving? Smith and Davidson say: "Because we're afraid. We're afraid that giving will be a loss and not a gain."

And so, this year's theme, "FEARLESS GENEROSITY." It seems to me that the biggest obstacle most of us have with giving has less to do with knowing what's good for us, and more to do with finding the courage to practice what we already know. -Dan, Stewardship 2017

FCCG DONATION CENTER

We are proud to announce that a new location has been designated for the storage of donated items. The new Donation Center is located between the Ruth Mix Classroom and the Nursery in the entry/exit hallway.

Six large bins are provided for those items that are collected over a period of time, such as magazines, and five containers are provided for donation drives sponsored by a specific Ministry, such as the current School Supplies drive sponsored by DWM. All of the new storage containers have changeable signage that allows the church to maximize this space according to the needs of specific donation drives. Brenda Keel, church administrator, will be able to create new signs as needed. Just let her know what you need.

Sponsors for the new Donation Center are Families & Professionals Ministry, Youth Ministry, Disciples of Women Ministry and Outreach Ministry. We invite you to come by, take a look at the new space and drop off a pencil or two for the current School Supplies drive.
